a poem about the Psyche knot written by Harvey Doxsee, Miss Patton's eldest pupil, and at one time her admirer.

Miss Patton began to teach in Islip last September. She is young and handsome, with dark eves and dark hair. Doxsee is about Miss Patton's own age and is good looking. He drives a handsome turnout, and he and Miss Patton have often taken drives together. She allowed him to take her home from prayer meetings and from social meetings.

A short time ago, however, his attentions to her ceased. This was commented upon by the village gossips, but the reason for the estrangement did not become known. Thereafter, the pupils say. Doxsee began to annoy Misss Patton by his behavior in her recitation room. The teacher bore this in silence until The teacher bore this in silence until
